

ICESA Campus Consortium Sexual Violence Prevention and Response Webinar Series

Engaging Men in Sexual Violence Prevention June 28, 1:00 - 2:30 pm EST

- ◆ How can we positively engage men in sexual assault prevention efforts?
- ◆ What are the best strategies for helping men understand their role in violence prevention?
- ◆ How can we encourage men to think critically about gender roles and violence?

Please join Dr. Steve Hines for a discussion about enlisting men in efforts around sexual assault prevention. Understandably, men have often been targeted as being part of the problem on campus. While there are valid reasons for this, Steve would like you to join him in a discussion about a different approach to getting men engaged in prevention work. We will explore the importance of having men involved in sexual assault prevention, as well as addressing some potential challenges. Finally, Steve will share his experiences working with identified groups of men on campus (i.e. student athletes and fraternity men).

About our Presenter:

Dr. Steve Hines is a Clinical Psychologist and Outreach Coordinator with Butler University Counseling and Consultation Services. He earned his Doctorate Degree at the University of Indianapolis and completed his doctoral internship with Virginia Tech's counseling center. Steve joined Butler in September of 2013 where he has continued his passion around sexual assault prevention on a university campus. Dr. Hines believes in taking a community based approach to prevention as well as empowering individuals to contribute to a safe and inclusive campus environment.

Register here for this free presentation!

Learn more about ICESA and the ICESA Campus Consortium.

Questions or Comments: mahri@indianacesa.org